

James Campbell, MD, MS, is a Cleveland native who completed undergraduate studies at the University of Michigan Honors College in 1980. He received his medical degree at the University of Cincinnati (1984) and followed with a residency in family medicine and fellowship in geriatrics at Case Western Reserve University, University Hospitals of Cleveland, and the Louis Stokes Cleveland Veteran's Administration Medical Center. Dr. Campbell completed a Master's in Clinical Epidemiology and Statistics at the University of Michigan in 1992.

Dr. Campbell led the Geriatric Evaluation and Management Unit at the Cleveland VA Medical Center from 1989 through 1993. During this time, he helped initiate Silver Pathways, one of the first alcohol treatment programs for older adults. In 1993, he moved to MetroHealth to lead the development of a geriatrics program. He was appointed Chair of Family Medicine in 1999, a position he proudly held until 2010. During this time, Dr. Campbell developed a large and successful geriatric academic program at MetroHealth and spearheaded the design and opening of the Senior Health & Wellness Center, a 225,000 square foot facility devoted to the comprehensive care of geriatric patients. In 2010, he was named Director, Geriatric Center at the Senior Health & Wellness Center. This Center is comprised of 13 board-certified geriatricians and 14 geriatric nurse practitioners. In addition to delivering 26,000 outpatient visits, the geriatric service provides medical direction to seven nursing facilities and has over 20,000 long term care visits each year. Dr. Campbell is a Professor of Family Medicine at Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine, Chair of Geriatrics, the Co-Medical Director of MetroHealth's Accountable Care Organization and the Medical Director of the Jennings Center for Older Adults in Garfield Heights, Ohio.

Dr. Campbell has published numerous articles and book chapters in the areas of substance abuse in elders, physician home care, and geriatric trauma. His research efforts have focused on these same areas of interest and, most recently, on preparing faculty and physicians-in-training to practice in a quality-driven, patient-centered model of care delivery. In collaboration with the SOROS Foundation, MetroHealth Family Medicine and Geriatrics has done training for health care professionals in Eastern Europe.

Dr. Campbell was selected in 2002 by the John A. Hartford Foundation as one of 11 Geriatric Leadership Scholars and, in 2008, as a Practice Change Fellow. He has served on the Board of the American Geriatrics Society and the National Chronic Care Consortium. He has been President of the Ohio Geriatrics Society and Co-Chair of the Council on State-Affiliate Representatives. He is the recipient of the CWRU School of Medicine Teaching Innovation/Excellence Award and, in 2006, he was honored by Menorah Park Center with the prestigious Dr. Arnold L. Heller Memorial Award. He has been awarded the "Best Doctor in Family Medicine and Geriatrics" 12 years in a row.
